A QUESTION FOR DEMOCRATS.

One of the most prominent considerations in the present discussion of the nation's financial system is the fact that legislation has tended in the direction of monopoly. The Republican party, so long in power, became the party of a class, and the laws for which its various administrations are responsible were made for the benefit of the few.

It is but natural that in this condition of affairs the people have become dissatisfied and demand a return to those principles in which they shall be considered.

In this complaint there is much of fact, for it is plain that in Congress and in our State legislatures there has been a controlling factor, used to bring about advantages to certain manufacturers and corporations. The Republican high-tariff scheme, supported by monied men generally, was of great disadvantage to another large class—the farmer, and it is this latter class who now demand a change.

Of the nature of a change there is scarcely much question. In the election of McKinley the purpose will not be accomplished. This is conceded by many Republicans, even, and they, together with many Democrats, seek the desired improvement in the free coinage of silver, that would restore regularity to the currency of the York county people. This motion had a different part, Dr. Mehlendorfer had a different idea. He thought that there was no system of apportionment of the electoral votes in Adams and Cumberland because it had been several years ago, by which York county received five delegates. That account he thought might be brought up, and then at the last election the two counties went back to the former practice they abrogated the new. York county therefore had a right to submit a new system. He moved and explained to this effect:

Statistics of Farm Crops.

Figures Show the Decrease in Prices in Sixteen Years.

The Agricultural Department at Washington has published circular No. 1, called "The eleven states should meet after their adjournment to consider the Cumberland and Adams claimants of their respective states, and instructions, now pasted by a copy of the resolutions of apportionment." That when the conference comes off they should if possible, call a meeting of the members of the Cumberland and Adams conference—in number—preceded with the conference being a majority, and thus leave to the conference to decide what to do. That would restore regularity to the currency of the York county people. This motion was adopted.

COSTLY INSTITUTIONS.

Cadwalader Biddle, Esq., Secretary and Agent of the Penn. Public Charities, and Dr. J. W. C. O'Neal, Commissioner, visited last week the State and County Institutions in the counties of Lancaster, York, Franklin, Fulton, Cumberland, Dauphin, Mifflin, Perry and Juniata, and found them without exception in good condition. The violations of the law were in Adams and Franklin counties, where in each a boy, under age, was found confined with older persons. In Adams county a portion of the Insane Asylum was found to be occupied by the Superintendent of the insane, which was designed for the use of the better class of the insane, in violation of the plans and specifications of the building submitted to the Board of Public Charities.

FARMERS' INSTITUTES.

BY JOHN HAMILTON, DIRECTOR OF INSTITUTES.

The first institutes held in this state were under the control of the state board of agriculture. This board was composed of one member from each county, together with three appointees of the governor and six ex-officio members. The number of institutes held in 1856 was six. Since then it has increased annually, until this last year it reached 100. Most of these were of two days' duration, and each instiute was made up of five sessions, beginning usually in the afternoon of the first day, and closing with the evening session of the second. The work up until the winter of 1856-57 was under the exclusive management of the members of the state board. Appropriations from time to time by the state legislature were distributed pro rata among the members, and all expenses connected with the institute were paid by the local member, and all expenses connected with the institute were paid out of this fund, which had been appropriated to each county. A report was made at the close of the season to the secretary of the state board, at Harrisburg, giving a detailed account of the various purposes for which the expenditures were made.

The legislature at its session in the winter of 1855, organized a Department of Agriculture for the commonwealth, and consolidated the various divisions of the work into a single department. The institute work was placed in charge of the deputy secretary of agriculture, who was also to be director of institutes. The act declares that "it shall be the duty of the director of institutes to arrange them in such manner as to time and places of holding them same, as to secure the greatest economy and efficiency of service, and to this end it shall, in each county where such institutes are held, hold a meeting with the local member of the state board of agriculture, together with the representatives duly appointed by each county agricultural, horticultural or other like organization, with reference to the appointment of speakers and other local arrangements." A separate appropriation of $7,500 was made for the expenses of the institute work for the year.

It has been the practice to publish, in pamphlet form, a list of those who were willing to take part as lecturers in the institute work, together with the subjects that each was willing to discuss. From this list were selected persons to report in certain counties. In some cases only necessary traveling expenses were paid, and in others a slight compensation for services was allowed. During the past season the institutes were arranged so as to come in consecutive order, and by this means the traveling expenses of the lecturers were reduced to a minimum. The first institutes were held in the latter part of October, and the work was continued with out intermission until April 1. During most of this time there were two sets of lecturers in the field, and two sets of institutes being conducted simultaneously. It has been found that there are inconveniences in continuing the work so late into the spring, and during the coming season it is expected that we will be able to close up our institutes by the middle of March. A certain proportion of the funds received from the state are distributed to the various counties to be used for local purposes, such as advertising, printing programs, rent of halls, hotel bills and traveling expenses of the speakers, etc., and the remainder of the fund is returned for the purpose of paying the expenses of the lectures provided by the state. Last winter four regular lectures were on the force, and at times five and six. Our experience has convinced us that about two capable lectures, provided by the state, are sufficient for carrying on any institute, wherever local help of efficient character can be secured. The purpose of the department is to develop local talent of the various districts in the state, and we have found that the best method to accomplish this is to limit the amount of outside help to about two speakers. There are 75 counties in our state, varying greatly both in area and population; and in order to make an equitable distribution of the funds, and of the time of the state lecturers, we have taken as a basis the number of farms in the various counties as given by the census of 1850, apportioning a certain sum to each farm.

Under the new law of 1857, the director of institutes has organized county boards of managers, composed of one representative from each pomona grange, county alliance, county agricultural or horticultural organization. These representatives, together with the local member of the state board of agriculture, have charge of the institute work in their county, and all funds for the purpose are paid into the hands of the chairman of this committee. This board suggests places for holding the institutes, secured from speakers, arranges the programs, and has general charge of the advertising of the institutes. Before the institutes open a complete list of the dates when each institute is to be held, is made out, and sent to all of the local members and managers throughout the state. Copies also, of the list of lecturers are sent, thus giving these various boards opportunity to select from it such speakers for their local assistance as they may desire.

About Cottonseed Meal.

Cottonseed meal is the residue left after extraction of the oil by pressure. When fresh, it is a bright yellow color with a sweet, nutty flavor, but becomes discolored and deteriorates with age. Black spots show adulteration with the hulls. It is a very rich, nitrogenous or muscle building stock food, with more or less fat according to the effectiveness of the oil extraction. It is comparatively poor in starch and sugar and notably poor in protein, requiring that it be fed with grain, or with feeds to supply the necessary balance to fill the stomach. It is a fair richer feed than cornmeal, or wheat.

Cottonseed meal is largely used in the eastern states as a fertilizer, its value for that purpose being computed in the same manner as that of other fertilizers. It can often be bought at prices which justify its use for that purpose, although the more usual and rational practice is to feed it. There is, however, danger of injurious effects from the free feeding of cottonseed meal, especially when not perfectly fresh. It must not be fed to young stock.

In the process of manufacturing cottonseed products the seed after being cleaned is hulled, the hulls forming a good manure for pastures. They are also used in the carbohydrates. They are considered useful for that purpose. For the most part, however, they are burned as fuel, and are used for the heating of buildings, especially as a fuel for steam power, rich in potash and phosphoric acid. To some extent they are baked and enter into commerce, usually to be used as animal food.

PICKLE BOTTLE METEOROLOGY.

The condition of the weather may be told in the following way: Get a pickle bottle and fill it with water to within three inches of the top. Plunge the neck of an empty pickle bottle into the pickle bottle. Before rain, the water will rise two or three inches in the neck of the pickle bottle. If the weather is to remain dry, the water will remain at the bottom of the neck. It never fails to forecast rain. The water need not be changed so long as you can see through it. The oil flask must be cleaned by soda and warm water before the neck is plunged in the water.

Kings New Discovery as an ideal panacea for all diseases. I have used it myself, and having had it in my family for the last five years, to the exclusion of physician's prescriptions or other preparations."

"I have been a Minister of the Methodist

COAL-OIL AND TREES.

An exchange says that Samuel Brecht, a prosperous farmer of Worcester township, Bucks county, in exterminating worms that were gnawing at the vitals of his cherry apple trees, inadvertently destroyed the entire orchard. Mr. Brecht having been told that coal oil, applied to the roots of the trees, would stop the progress of the worms, dug up the soil about the base of the trees and saturated the ground with coal oil. This week the disastrous effect of the kerosene was discovered. Every one of the thirty-five trees comprising the well-kept orchard, was cut down and dying, the result, it is said, of the influence of the oil on the roots. The trees were planted fifteen years ago, and were in excellent bearing condition.

With so many institutes to be held this year, the State Department of Agriculture should be able through its lecturers to give the cause of better roads a big boom. Good roads are scarcely less important to the farmers of the State than good crops, for the crops must be hauled over the roads to a market, and there is no item of the process by which the farmer secures the reward of his industry other costs than that of transportation. Good roads make transportation and greater profits to the farmer. As an agricultural investment good roads will certainly prove profitable, to say nothing of the added comfort and convenience they will bring to the whole community.—Philadelphia.
